

Identifying Requirements

The first step in the process of developing NASA Best Practices is the elucidation of NASA documentation requirements. These requirements come from many sources including existing metadata systems, future missions, NASA science teams, and users (see Figure 1). Those that come from existing metadata systems are well known and already implemented in operational systems. In contrast, mission and user requirements tend to be emergent, particularly for future missions and applications.

NASA Documentation Requirements

